

denizen

In late spring this hinge of red began to sing from his perch within our pine, a squatter

I'd call him
if he did not sing so eloquently, of what I can't even fathom, so hermetic not even the erudite squirrels had a clue, possibly (given his plumage) nothing more than "I'm brighter than you."

###