

eating flowers on a winter morning the dab of honey on the lip of the ceramic pot my brother gave me long ago tastes like spicy flowers tangy sweetness singing of late summer sunshine vibrating fields of yellow nectar collected drop by precious drop tingling on my tongue reminding me of pungent days to come

###