

Scarlet Blaze

Red roses cascade down the aged wooden fence
Returning guests for summer's extravaganza
Each rose swollen with color each one petal dense

Made of finest velvet weaved on looms intense
Of silk thread spun from falling stars ephemera
Red roses cascade down the aged wooden fence

Your beauty flows freely like wedding wine and hence
I am a drunken guest at your gala
Each rose swollen with color each one petal dense

Your perfumed air lingers as fragrant incense
Like the bumblebee I cannot resist your formula
Red roses cascade down the aged wooden fence

September arrives there is no defense
And first frost brings your ghastly golgatha
Each rose swollen with color each one petal dense

Eternally mine forever is my recompense
Alive always in my mind's memoria
Red roses cascade down the aged wooden fence
Each rose swollen with color each one petal dense
